Common Under Armour Interview Questions: Behavioral Questions

Behavioral interview questions assess your past experiences to predict your future performance. Under Armour typically uses the STAR method (Situation, Task, Action, Result) to evaluate candidates. Here are some common examples:

"Tell me about a time you failed." This isn't about admitting weakness; it's about demonstrating self-awareness and your ability to learn from mistakes. Highlight a specific situation, the task at hand, the actions you took, and the results, focusing on what you learned from the experience and how you improved. Emphasize your resilience and growth.

"Describe a time you worked on a team project that faced challenges. How did you overcome them?" This assesses your teamwork and problem-solving skills. Again, use the STAR method. Showcase your collaborative efforts, your ability to communicate effectively, and your contributions to resolving conflicts and achieving team goals. Highlight your leadership skills if applicable.

"Tell me about a time you had to adapt to a significant change." Under Armour is a dynamic company operating in a fast-paced industry. This question explores your adaptability and flexibility. Choose an example that showcases your ability to adjust to new situations, learn quickly, and maintain productivity amidst uncertainty.

"Give me an example of a time you went above and beyond your job description." This reveals your initiative, dedication, and commitment to excellence. Highlight a time you proactively identified a problem, took the initiative to find a solution, and exceeded expectations. Quantify your results whenever possible.

"How do you handle pressure and tight deadlines?" This is a standard interview question that evaluates your stress management and time-management skills. Demonstrate your ability to prioritize tasks, manage your time effectively, and stay calm under pressure.
