It's a rating system designed to guide parents and guardians on the suitability of various media content, including books, films, and games, for different age groups. These ratings consider factors like violence, sexual content, language, and themes. Understanding this system is crucial for making responsible choices about the media we consume.

Determining the Classificação Indicativa: A Case-by-Case Approach

There isn't a single, universally applied "classificação indicativa" for every Clube do Livro dos Homens. The rating depends entirely on the specific books selected for discussion within each individual group.

A book club focusing on lighthearted fiction will naturally have a different rating than one tackling complex themes of trauma or violence.

How to Assess the Rating:

1. Review the individual books: Examine the synopsis and reviews of each book under consideration. Look for indicators of mature themes or content that might not be suitable for younger audiences.
2. Consider the discussion topics: The discussions themselves could delve into mature or sensitive subjects, even if the chosen book is relatively tame.
3. Check for Brazilian rating systems on the books: Some books will explicitly carry a classification indicativa from the Brazilian rating system.
